TRING PARK SCHOOL For The Performing Arts

"A fusion of natural talent and creativity combined with fine teaching and direction".

Tring Park School for the Performing Arts stands at the forefront of artistic specialist education in the UK. It offers a unique opportunity for gifted young people who show an outstanding talent for the performing arts to specialise in Dance, Drama, Musical Theatre or Music, whilst gaining an excellent academic education to GCSE, BTEC and A level. Formerly known as Arts Educational School, Tring Park, the school has recently undergone some exciting changes that include a rebrand programme as well as planned development of the school's buildings. Along with traditional academic facilities, the school boasts a purpose-built theatre, many large dance studios, drama rehearsal rooms, music rooms, plus music technology and music composition rooms as well as a digital video-editing suite.

Principal Stefan Anderson says "Tring Park is unique. Talented children and young people benefit from an excellent standard of training in the performing arts, complemented by a very high level of academic education. This results in rounded individuals who are fully prepared for life – not just trained performers, but 'thinking' performers".

Tring Park School for the Performing Arts is housed in a former Rothschild family mansion situated in 17 acres of attractive grounds in Tring (Hertfordshire), only 33 miles from London with convenient access from nearby motorways. The school provides accommodation for over 200 boarders and up to 100 day pupils between the ages of 8-19. Entry to the school is by audition. There are a number of aided places for Dance available under the Government's Music and Dance Scheme and The Dance and Drama Awards and substantial school scholarships and bursaries for Musical Theatre and Drama.
