

Study Leave and Post-Examination Policy

Study Leave

We understand the importance of revision for public examinations and therefore, where appropriate, we provide students with the opportunity for additional study time during vocational lessons. Academic lessons during the exam period will also be focused on guided revision and exam practice.

If a student has afternoon public examinations, he or she will be allowed a half-day off lessons on the day of the examinations for independent study to take place in school. If a student has a morning exam, she or he will normally be allowed off for one vocational lesson the previous afternoon. Owing to the dual academic and vocational curriculum at Tring Park School we, unlike some boarding schools, cannot allow absence from school for study leave. There are performances up to the end of the Summer term and it is important that pupils are available for rehearsals as required.

Post-Examination Period

The school expects all pupils to be in school as normal in the period between the end of examinations and Founders' Day. This time is a normal working period for the school and all pupils are involved in either rehearsals or lessons. Should parents choose to withdraw their child from school before the end of term then, regrettably, the pupil will not be permitted to return for either Founders' Day or the Summer Ball.
